Councilman doesn't see future for tax increases

Smoked. City Councilman Bill Green said Mayor Nutter's proposal would not pass State Assembly.

Councilman Bill Green called the School District of Philadelphia "a drowning man ... in terms of its performance and in terms of its monetary funding."

At Thursday's City Council meeting, Green spoke out against Mayor Michael Nutter's tax plan that was introduced Wednesday and would tax cigarettes and liquor by the drink to raise money for the school district.

"While I support the Mayor's revenue proposals for schools, they are unlikely to pass the general Assembly, and frankly, [they] missed the point," Green said. "Even if they do, there is no more help coming from the general Assembly, so there will be a $200 million gap."

"The city is simply not capable of filling the gap for the current failing system by itself," he added.

Nutter's proposal includes a $2 tax hike on cigarettes, and a 5 percent increase on the liquor-by-the-drink tax. Along with plans for improved tax collections, Nutter said the plan would raise an estimated $95 million for the school district, which faces a $300 million deficit.

"The issue today is far more complicated than throwing more money at the school district."

Caught. Internet star arrested in Philly on NJ murder charge

Kai the Hitchhiker, the unlikely "hero" who allegedly used a hatchet to strike a man he witnessed running over a utility worker earlier this year in California, was caught in Philadelphia by city police Thursday evening after Union County, N.J., officials put out a warrant for his arrest in a murder case.

Kai, whose real name is Caleb Lawrence McGillvary, has been charged with the murder of Joseph Galfy Jr., a Clark, N.J., man.

McGillvary, 23, was arrested at the Greyhound Bus Terminal in the city.

The video of his TV interview, following the hatchet incident, went viral after it aired. METRO

Greenlit. SugarHouse Casino expansion gets Board approval

The Pennsylvania Gaming Control Board on Wednesday unanimously approved a $155 million expansion request by SugarHouse Casino.

The gaming floor will be expanded by 10,000 square feet, a new 10,000- to 15,000-square-foot event and conference center will be built, and the garage will be repositioned, axing about 1,200 parking spaces.

Plans also include a revamped casino entrance, further greening and development of SugarHouse's Delaware River waterfront promenade with new restaurants and a link to a riverfront bicycle trail. METRO

Memorial. Latin Americans honor slain Bucks teacher

Members of the Latin-American elementary school community will honor its American teacher Friday, three days after her untimely death.

A 24-year-old Bucks County native was killed Tuesday in an auto accident in the Dominican Republic, reports say.

Megan Garven, who taught third graders in the Caribbean country, is a 2007 graduate of Council Rock High School North in Newtown.

Garven's school, Santiago Christian School, canceled classes on Wednesday and will hold a memorial service Friday evening, according to its Facebook page.

The accident, in which three others were injured, occurred in Santiago. METRO Birthday. Philly honors its residents aged 100 or older.

Mayor Michael Nutter on Thursday hosted the 13th annual Mayor's Centenarians' Celebration for Philadelphians aged 100 and older.

"The city is lucky to have individuals from whom we can gather wisdom and knowledge," Nutter said while addressing the 108 centenarians.

The celebration's attendees included former assistant City Solicitor Daniel Rendine, who will be 103 in July.

When asked what advice he would give to younger generations, Rendine replied, "I would say moderation in all things — and to thank the good Lord for all he's done for them."

North Philadelphia resident Anita Bowen, 103, had similar words of wisdom.

"Trust in God and he'll direct them," she said.

By the numbers

About 201 Philadelphians reached centenarian status in 2013.

- The city has a total of 452 residents who are 100 or older.
- Anna Henderson is the oldest person in Pa. and the sixth oldest woman in the country.

Gunfire. Four people injured in Southwest Philly shooting spree

Four people were injured when bullets began flying in a Southwest Philadelphia neighborhood Wednesday night.

One of the shooting victims reportedly was inside her Elmwood home as far as a block away from the shooter or shooters.

The 26-year-old woman sustained a graze wound to her head, Philadelphia Police said Thursday morning. A police spokeswoman could not confirm multiple reports the woman was inside her home when she was struck by a stray bullet.

Also injured in the hail of bullets in the area of Daggett Street and Dicks Avenue about 9:20 p.m. were a 41-year-old man, who was shot in the back of his left shoulder, and a 19-year-old man, who was shot in his right leg, police said. A fourth individual, identified as a 21-year-old man, also reportedly was shot in his back.

The bullet that struck the 41-year-old man exited through his chest, according to police.

Police took all four victims to the Hospital of the University of Pennsylvania. All were listed in stable condition as of Thursday morning.

Nearly 30 rounds reportedly were fired by the gunman or gunmen.

There's no lack of media coverage on Israel, the Middle East's sole democracy with civil rights and a free press. What is lacking is objective coverage. This tiny Jewish nation, the size of New Jersey, with less than eight million people, a quarter of them non-Jewish, generally receives inaccurate, harsh, even hostile coverage from the world's press.

Temporary. IRS head chosen as tea party rallies on scandal

President Barack Obama on Thursday chose a White House budget official to lead the beleaguered Internal Revenue Service temporarily and vowed to ensure that the tax-collection agency will not single out any more groups based on their political beliefs.

Danny Werfel, the controller of the Office of Management and Budget who served as a point man on the controversial automatic spending cuts known as "sequestration," will start in the new post on May 22.

Obama is racing to get out in front of a scandal that threatens to derail his second-term agenda as Republicans and conservative groups accuse his administration of using the levers of power to persecute political enemies. REUTERS

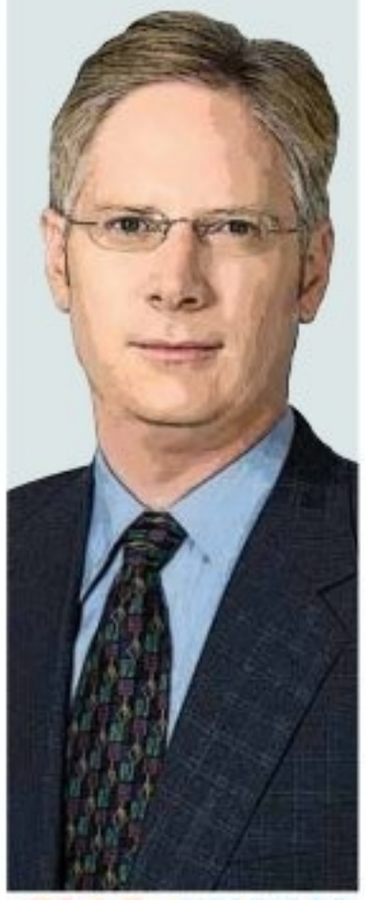
Opinion

TOM FOREMAN

POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT FOR CNN



CNN=POLITICS

INDIANA OBAMA AND THE TEMPLE OF DOOM

Like Harrison Ford in a wild adventure, President Obama was looking for any safe haven this week amid a storm of attacks. Outrage over the IRS's ham-handed approach to conservatives is thundering down like a giant boulder; the Justice Department's "Big Brother" move on the Associated Press is being answered by a hail of poisonous darts; and the administration's Benghazi email chain is coiling like a python around the president's trusted sidekick, Jay Carney.

You can almost see him shouting from the White House briefing room, "Run, Mr. President … save yourself!"

Mr. Obama has so far taken his usual approach as coolly as the erstwhile Professor Jones reaching for his bull whip. First, he acted as if everything was merely being inflated by his political enemies. Then he tentatively said he was just as concerned as anyone else. And now he is in full-blown umbrage, suggesting he is as surprised, disgusted and furious over everything as a Tea Partier from Arizona.

Quoted

"Think about it. When he rose to power, 'change' was a one-word treasure map."

But even if he fends off all the charges, he may yet pay a price. No, he won't be impeached, as much as some Republicans may fantasize about such things. But the questions strike at the core of his administration's message: You can trust the government. With your security, your taxes and your health care.

Think about it. When he rose to power, "change" was a one-word treasure map. It promised a new covenant between Washington and voters in which honesty, transparency and square dealing would count more than politics as usual. Now, a countermessage is clanging like a gong: maybe not. Maybe voters can't trust Barack Obama's government any more than they did those in the past.

Whether or not you are rooting for this president to escape the Temple of Doom shaping up around him, this is the part to remember: His magic talisman, through all his struggles, has been the general sense among many voters that they can trust him. And even as he scrambles to answer the challenges all around, that foundation is undeniably trembling.

Gold valued at $625K goes missing at Miami airport

A shipment of gold with a declared value of $625,000 has gone missing in a suspected heist at Miami International Airport.

A theft incident report from the Miami-Dade Police Department said the gold, packed in a box, arrived at Miami International early Tuesday morning on an American Airlines flight from Guayaquil, Ecuador.

Miami International serves as a major trans-shipment point for large quantities of gold produced in South America and exported primarily to Switzerland for refining.

The cargo was unloaded but the box containing the gold disappeared after apparently being loaded onto a motorized luggage cart. REUTERS

At least six people were killed when a powerful tornado ripped through a neighborhood including a Habitat for Humanity low-income housing area in the north Texas town of Granbury on Wednesday, marking the deadliest severe storm outbreak in the United States this year.

Authorities warned the death toll could rise because seven people were missing after the storms, which struck from early evening to around dusk, flattening buildings and uprooting trees across at least four counties near the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

Hardest hit was Granbury, a town of 8,000 people about 35 miles southwest of Dallas-Fort Worth.

In Hood County, where Granbury is located, spokesman Tye Bell said six people were dead, seven missing and at least 45 injured, most from a single subdivision of homes in the town.

Frank Gamez, who works in construction in Granbury, said he found a friend dead on Wednesday night as he and other people were searching the neighborhood.

"We lost one of our friends. We found him laying on the ground," Gamez said.

Hood County Sheriff Roger Deeds said authorities were searching homes to try to find people who might still be trapped in the rubble.

All six of the people confirmed killed were found in Rancho Brazos, a neighborhood of around 110 mostly single family homes on the fringe of Granbury that bore the brunt of the winds, Deeds said. REUTERS

Maryland governor signs tough new gun control law

Opposition. The NRA has announced plans to challenge the new state gun control laws, including those in Maryland.

Maryland Gov. Martin O'Malley on Thursday signed into law one of the United States' toughest gun control measures, even as opponents vowed to overturn it.

The legislation prompted by the Newtown, Conn., school massacre requires handgun buyers to undergo safety training and submit fingerprints to obtain a license.

"We've chosen to take action by advancing the strategies that work to save lives," O'Malley, a Democrat mentioned as a potential presidential candidate in 2016, said in a statement.

The new law also reduces magazine capacity from 20 rounds to 10 rounds. People who have been involuntarily committed to a mental health facility will be banned from gun ownership.

Maryland joins Connecticut and New York in expanding assault weapons bans and restricting the capacity of magazines in the aftermath of the Newtown elementary school shooting that killed 20 students and six adults in December. REUTERS

Deaths

The bill also bans the sale of 45 types of assault weapons, which have been linked to at least 461 U.S. deaths since 2004, according to the governor's office.

The bill also strengthens the state's ability to regulate gun dealers and bars some violent offenders from obtaining a gun while on probation. / GETTY IMAGES

US soldier who killed servicemen gets life in prison

A U.S. Army sergeant was sentenced to life in prison without parole on Thursday for killing five fellow servicemen in a shooting spree in Iraq, one of the worst cases of violence by an American soldier against other U.S. troops.

In a deal that spared him the death penalty, Sgt. John Russell pleaded guilty last month to killing two medical staff officers and three soldiers at the Camp Liberty combat stress clinic, which is located near Baghdad's airport.

The military has said the 2009 shooting might have been triggered by combat stress. REUTERS

Attempted murder

Suspect charged in New Orleans Mother's Day shooting

A 19-year-old New Orleans man was charged on Thursday with 20 counts of attempted second-degree murder in connection with a shooting at a Mother's Day parade.

Officials now say 20 people were injured in the incident on Sunday, up from the 19 previously reported.

Akein Scott was arrested late Wednesday in New Orleans, police said. At a hearing early on Thursday, a judge set Scott's bail at $10 million, or $500,000 for each count.

Scott, wearing an orange jumpsuit in the courtroom, did not speak at the hearing. REUTERS

Interview. Jessica Walter slips right back into the boozy matriarch role that made her famous — again.

By her count, Jessica Walter has been a member of the Screen Actors Guild for 50 years, a period of time that encompasses a vast body of work — dramatic ("Grand Prix"), suspenseful ("Play Misty for Me," opposite Clint Eastwood), supernatural ("Dr. Strange") and, most recently, comedic ("Archer"). But for Walter, the forthcoming return of "Arrested Development" offers a reassuring reminder that her career has transcended not just different genres, but different generations.

"Certainly demographically, there are probably people who thought I was dead," Walter jokes.

Returning as boozy matriarch Lucille Bluth, Walter says virtually every line of dialogue in the 15 new episodes creator Mitchell Hurwitz wrote has a double (or even triple) meaning, much like those in the 53 episodes of the show that were broadcast during its three seasons on Fox. But because each episode now focuses on a different character instead of simply following Jason Bateman's Michael Bluth, conversational contexts shift frequently — a change that provided a considerable challenge for the cast as they navigated Hurwitz's latticework of plot strands and one-liners. "We didn't know a whole lot a lot of the time, which makes it much more difficult," she admits. "In the end, it all worked out, but it's a strange way to work because you don't have all of the materials."

Still, even after a seven-year hiatus between the show's cancellation and its Netflix rebirth, Walter says she slipped easily back into the role. "The thing about our show, which I think you probably realize from watching it, is that the writing is so character-specific," she observes.

She says her maternal instinct kicked in as soon as she encountered actor Tony Hale, who plays her tragic son Buster, maimed after he ignored a warning to beware of what he thought somebody was saying was Lucille. As viewers will remember, it was really a loose seal, which ate his hand whole.

"Once I heard Tony's voice and once I saw him, there he was with the hook and his pathetic demeanor — he was my little Busty again."

Between "Arrested Development" and "Archer," on which she plays another alkie mom, Walter finds herself in the midst of a remarkable career renaissance, a fact she's grateful for, regardless of whether people know her prior to playing these cantankerous, irresistibly manipulative mothers.

"I'm so glad they think of something," she says humbly. "At my age I'm privileged that they think of something, so it doesn't bother me a bit if they think of me as Lucille."

Flashback

Do not play 'Misty' for her

We did not ask Jessica Walter about that movie where she has sex with Clint Eastwood. For his 1971 directorial debut "Play Misty for Me," Clint cast her as a woman who becomes obsessed with his sexy radio DJ. Walter became cinema's first-ever crazed one-night stand victim, who begins attacking him and his loved ones with a knife-wielding fury. She was so good she was borderline uncastable for years — that's how terrifying her performance was. But she's not known for that character as much anymore, thankfully.

"I have people that are my age and older who know who I am, who remember some of my work from the old days," says Walter. "Then I used to get, 'Wow, my mother really likes you.' Then I'd get, 'My grandma really likes you.' And now I get 'I really like you!' So how can I be unhappy about that?"

What will be on your TV this summer

Entertainment. Set your DVR for these new and returning series.

May

'Family Tree'

Sundays, 10:30 p.m., HBO
Chris O'Dowd ("Bridesmaids") stars in Christopher Guest's new series about a man who traces his heritage in search of meaning in his life.

'Newlyweds: The First Year'

Mondays, 10 p.m., Bravo
Sorry, Nick and Jessica fans — there's no going back to those days. Instead, Bravo's newest follows four newlywed couples, like bi-coastal Christians Kimberly and Alaska, domestic partners Jeff and Blair (16 years apart!) and suburb-dwelling Kathryn and John.

'The Goodwin Games'

Premieres Monday, 8:30 p.m., Fox
Scott Foley returns to TV on this comedy as Henry, a man estranged from his siblings who's starting over with the money from his father's inheritance.

'Does Someone Have to Go?'

Premieres Thursday, 9 p.m., Fox
Ever want to fire one of your co-workers? Live your dreams vicariously through the employees on this reality show, who are suddenly thrown into managerial roles.

'Brooklyn DA'

Premieres Tuesday, May 28, 10 p.m., CBS
This reality series takes you behind the closed doors of Brooklyn courts,

Scott Michael Campbell and Kristin Lehman share a scene in ABC's "Motive." / CAROLE SEGAL, ABC

'Motive'

Premieres Thursday, 9 p.m., ABC
You might be thinking, "Another cop drama? Groan." But this one works backwards, showing the murder first and tracing it back to the killer's reasons.

June

'Princesses: Long Island'

Premieres June 2, 9 p.m., Bravo
If you miss "Jersey Shore," we predict you'll quickly fall back into the habit with this show, which follows six young women still living with their parents on Long Island.

'Mistresses'

Premieres Monday, June 3, 10 p.m., ABC
We wish this were a reality show, but alas, it's a nighttime soap with a cast of familiars, like Alyssa Milano and Yunjim Kim ("Lost"). It centers on four friends who, well, look at the title.

'The Hero'

Premieres June 6, 8 p.m., TNT
If you haven't seen enough of Dwayne "The Rock" Johnson lately — and really, who has? — tune in to this reality competition, in which he'll pit nine people against one another to test their strength, courage and integrity. The winner is dubbed "The Hero" and gets a prize. Yay!

'Sinbad'

Premieres June 8, 9 p.m., Syfy
This British import tracks the sea voyage of the eponymous hero who's trying to get rid of a curse. Another "Lost" star, Naveen Andrews, is back on TV, here as Lord Akbari.

'My Teen is Pregnant and So Am I'

Premieres June 11, 10 p.m., TLC
Leave it to TLC to provide us with this gem. We've been told that "as their bellies grow, so does the tension."

'Devious Maids'

Premieres June 23, 10 p.m., Lifetime
This Marc Cherry-led "Desperate Housewives" copycat follows the lives of women and the secrets they keep because of their jobs as maids to the rich and powerful.

'Whose Line Is It Anyway?'

Premieres July 15, 8 p.m., The CW

We're totally counting this as a series premiere, even though it's been off the air for about a decade. The new version marks the return of Ryan Stiles, Wayne Brady and Colin Mochrie (!) and is hosted by Aisha Tyler.

'The Hunt'

Premieres July 31, 9 p.m., The CW

The CW made "The Hunger Games" into a TV show, somehow. Twelve teams of two live in the wild for one month, competing against each other for resources.

Floppy-haired radicals

French youth drama. The latest from Olivier Assayas explores a generation that missed the good stuff.

The films of French director Olivier Assayas capture the spark of life lived in the moment. In "Carlos," his epic, three-part account of the terrorist Carlos the Jackal, history seemed to become present. His roaming camera trailed energized people looking not back or forward, but caught up recklessly in the now. No one lives recklessly in the now better than youth.

In Assayas' "Something in the Air," the characters in the film, chiefly floppy-haired young artist Gilles (Clement Metayer), are college-aged and precocious, hungry but misdirected. Fresh off a dumping, young Gilles falls in with Christine (Lola Creton). Christine is politically minded and embroils the pouty, self-serious Gilles in radicalism. This only briefly energizes him, but not before a caper winds up nearly killing a policeman.

In its native France, "Something in the Air" is called "After May," a reference to the storied events of May 1968, when workers' strikes swept across France. Students were among those who joined in solidarity, leading to violent clashes with the police. Set in the mid-'70s, "Something in the Air" concerns the people who wished they were there. The characters pretend they're living in times as volatile as May 1968. They aren't, and any good they could do is averted by bickering and in-fighting.

Lola Creton (with Clement Metayer in the background) plays a radical youth in "Something in the Air." / IFC

Assayas sticks with Gilles, who over the course of the film drifts from drawing to politics to — just like his maker — movies. The shape-shifting nature of the film makes for a less thrilling experience than Assayas' other youth picture "Cold Water." (It briefly nods to that film, with another country-set house party with loud rock music.) But it's about the after-party anyway. It's am incisive, devastasting portrait of the decay of youth, when interests narrow, and you wind up doing something you never imagined.

Venus and Serena get a Wikipedia doc

The documentary profile "Venus and Serena" was likely pitched as boasting unprecedented access to the tennis stars — as though that was all a film required to be minimally useful. It's not clear whether the Williamses are any more upfront about themselves than they have been in untold interviews. It's not even apparent if the end product is any more comprehensive than the untold television profiles. This is pure Wikipedia documentary filmmaking, plowing through Venus and Serena's conjoined story, doing some light delving into certain issues and leaving fans knowing only slightly more than they did before. As with a lot of largely expository doc profiles, "Venus and Serena" will be useful largely to those who know very little about the sisters, and to those who know almost everything but are hungry for a few random trivia scraps.

The 'Price' is (mostly) right

Blue-collar drama. The director of "Goodbye Solo" finally works with the "High School Musical" kid.

Zac Efron, Kim Dickens and Dennis Quaid star in Ramin Bahrani's Illinois-set drama "At Any Price." MATT DINERSTEIN, SONY PICTURES CLASSICS

If there's anyone in American cinema today more consciously carrying the torch of classic European neorealist cinema, it's Ramin Bahrani. "Man Push Cart," "Chop Shop" and "Goodbye Solo" are all perceptive looks at the working class that don't simply honor their struggle but respect them enough to reveal their flaws. Perhaps it's inevitable that every director winds up with a star-heavy cast, even if one of those stars is Zac Efron.

Dennis Quaid plays Henry Whipple, a small-town Illinois seed farmer first seen lecturing his layabout son Dean (Efron) on the finer points of shamelessly manipulating people using a big grin and a forced positive attitude. A third-generation business owner, he keeps things going with genetically altered seeds and a shortage of ethics, and expects his two sons to carry on the family name. But one is off traipsing about Argentina, while Dean seems uninterested in everything, save striking back at dad.

Where Bahrani's previous films were tightly focused, the bigger "Price" — which also makes room for Heather Graham as an evil Midwestern version of a temptress — is more diffuse. But there's so much that's good here. Quaid, as a kind of grifter who's been "on" so long he's even fooled himself, hasn't been this energized in ages. And Bahrani stretches his stuff. The most shocking parts come during scenes depicting Dean's sudden jones for stock-car driving. The racing sequences are bizarrely kinetic, with Bahrani shedding his gritty realist side for an almost there approximation of "Ronin"-era John Frankenheimer.

Under cardigan sweaters lurked a psychopath

Crime saga. Michael Shannon is ill-used in this look at a suburban dad-turned-killer.

With his towering stature, crumpled mug and marbly voice, Michael Shannon has carved out a career playing ticking time bombs. The funniest moment of "The Iceman" arrives early, when his Richard Kuklinski tells Winona Ryder's dim-bulb Deborah that he dubs Disney cartoons for a living. Of course we know better: He's Michael Shannon.

Kuklinski is, in fact, the notorious Gambino family enforcer who claimed to have killed anywhere between 100 and 350 people (his accounts varied) before dying in prison in 2006. Until the law caught up with Kuklinski in 1986, friends and family had no clue that this devoted suburban dad with a penchant for cardigan sweaters held a day job as a homicidal psychopath.

This sordid little bit of true crime trivia gets a grungy big-screen treatment from director Ariel Vromen, who can't seem to decide if he's making an art-house character study or a grindhouse exploitation picture. The result is an ugly muddle, burying an absurdly overqualified cast beneath phony handlebar moustaches and the umpteenth iterations of New Jersey goombah stereotypes.

Strange celebrity cameos abound, feeling like favors from the filmmaker's famous friends. James Franco drops by for five minutes just to get killed, in a bit of business that probably would have been chilling if his presence weren't so distracting. The movie is hijacked for a spell by Chris Evans, delivering a gonzo turn as a zonked-out hitman who drives an ice cream truck in which he freezes corpses, allegedly to confuse the time of death in coroners' reports.

Evans' jabber-jaw Cheech and Chong shtick feels like such a relief because it's terribly difficult to spend an entire movie with Shannon's Kuklinski. Gruff, emotionally constipated and remote, he's an alienating presence, and Vromen's film aspires to no insight besides the fact that he killed lots of people. The chintzy musical score and dingy cinematography give "The Iceman" a cheap, direct-to-video feel. It's a low-rent movie with an expensive cast.

On stereotyping our superheroes

Batman. The Black Age of Comics Convention explores the role of black characters.

There aren't too many black superheroes, judging by the stars of summer blockbusters and the faces seen in mainstream comics.

The mission of the annual East Coast Black Age of Comics Convention this weekend is to push for greater representation of blacks in comics, and to promote youth literacy along the way.

"They're basing the movies on the stories most people are familiar with," says Yumy Odom, who founded the East Coast Black Age of Comics Convention in 2002. "It's really about having a range of characters, that's what's missing. A lot of it is stereotypes and [black characters] who are secondary and tertiary characters in the stories. They're turning out a black Batman, who needs that? Why not make an entirely new character?"

Milestone Comics, creator of "Heroes," will be recognized at the convention. / PROVIDED

Artist and writer Jack Kirby is considered a trailblazer for black characters — his Black Panther was the first black superhero in a mainstream title when he appeared in the "Fantastic Four" in 1966 — but the Panther started an unfortunate trend for Kirby. He gave several of his black characters the prefix "black" for their superhero names.

Creating comics from a white perspective is a deep-rooted condition, Odom says: "Sometimes black artists will have the same mind frame as some of the other people and never draw a black character."

The convention opens with the Glyph Comics Awards, which recognizes the best in comics made by, for and about black people in the last year. On Saturday, it's a day of networking, panel discussions, film screenings, a comic book marketplace, workshops and a "cosplay," i.e. costume play, event. Highlights include a screening of the documentary "White Scripts and Black Supermen," which will be followed by a discussion with filmmaker Jonathan Gayles.

"We're celebrating black-themed comic books and trying to get people on board with the 21st century," Odom says.

Life and death decisions

Theater. The new show at Papermill tells the story of two brothers attempting a daring coup d'etat.

Growing up in Los Angeles, John Rosenberg had a fist-pumping, Rambo-inflected pro-U.S. stance on the Vietnam War. "I was super Mr. America," Rosenberg recalls, "and then I grew up and stopped being an idiot."

In 2009, Rosenberg and a female friend traveled to Ho Chi Minh City, the former Saigon, where her sister was a journalist. ("Maybe she was preparing me for what the East Coast was like by taking me to Vietnam," Rosenberg jokes.) While there, they visited Reunification Palace, the home of the president of South Vietnam during the war. Rosenberg's attention was captured by the gambling room, where the powerful would gather to unwind.

"It's a very beautiful, comfortable place where powerful people made decisions about life and death," Rosenberg says. "Something about it really captured my imagination. I really wanted to do a play that took place in the room, but then I realized that there was something strange about an American dude writing a play that took place in a Vietnamese palace."

Instead, he wrote "The Gambling Room," the story of two brothers in the U.S. diplomatic corps attempting a coup d'etat in South Vietnam in 1963. "I usually write plays that take place somewhere historically, but they're all very personal stories," he says. "So within a story that takes place during these coups and backstabbings and betrayals, there are beautiful things about families or relationships that I was able to dig into and discover and play with."

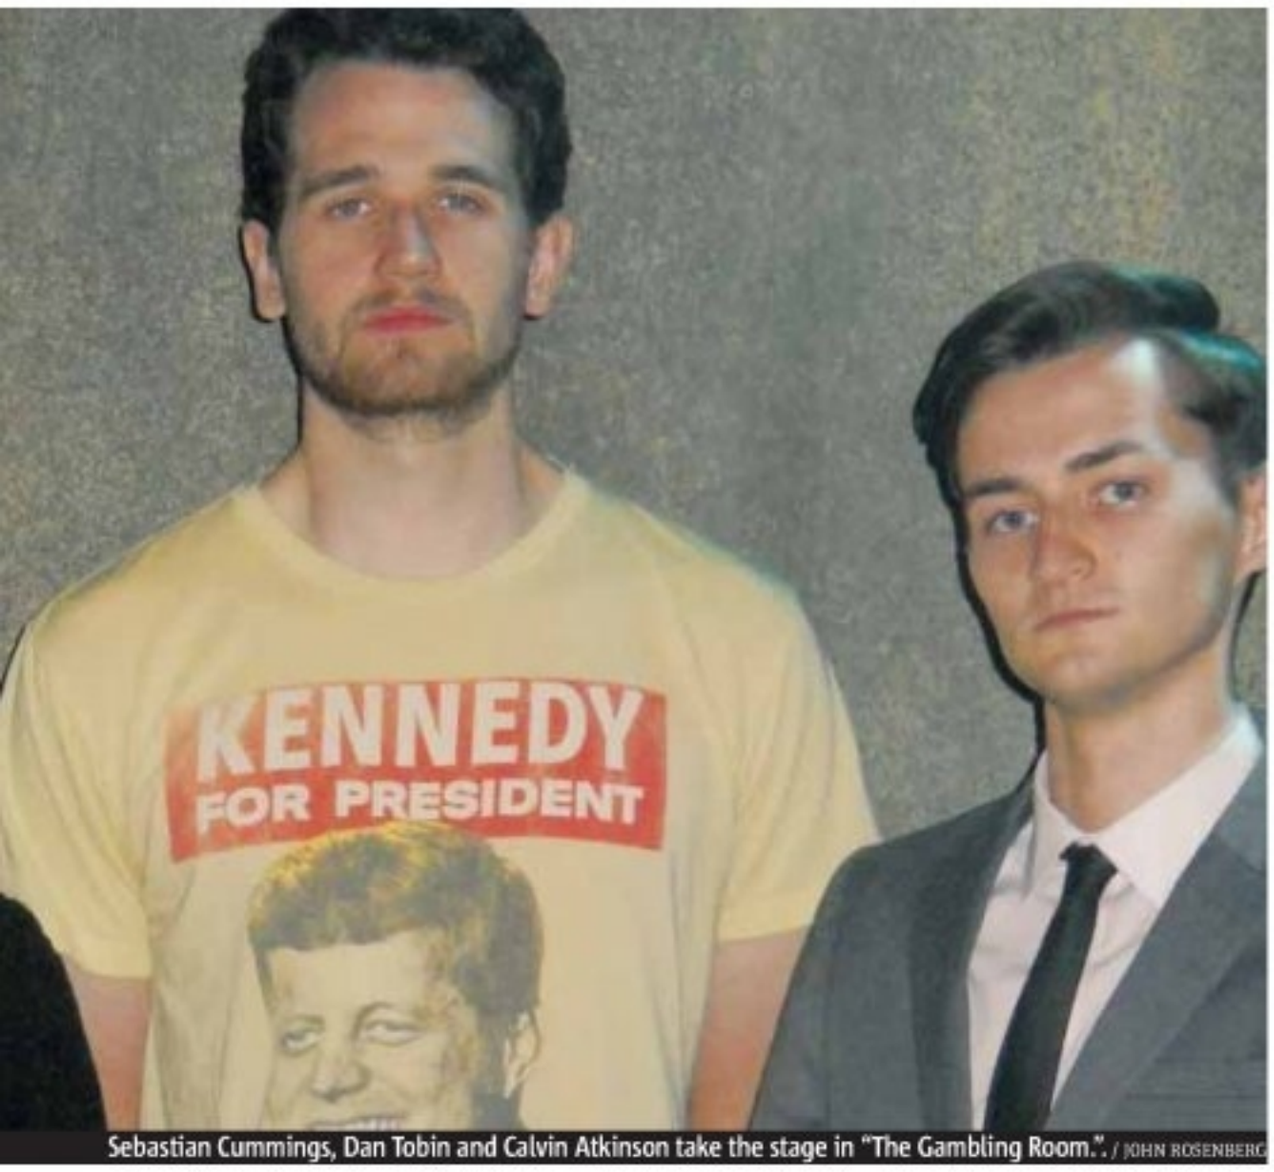
in 'The Gambling Room'



Sebastian Cummings, Dan Tobin and Calvin Atkinson take the stage in "The Gambling Room.". / JOHN ROSENBERG

DIY, FYI

The play premieres this Saturday at the Papermill Theater, Rosenberg's intimate space in the Papermill Arts Collective, a five-story warehouse in Kensington which also features artist workspace, a gallery and a community library. Maintaining the space allows Rosenberg to premiere his own work on a DIY level.

"I don't want to write plays and send them out and hope they get produced at some point," Rosenberg says. "If I'm going to put that much work into writing a play, why not fully develop it? I'm just some dude; I can't expect other people to put on my bulls— work, so I might as well do it."

Young composers take center stage at Curtis concert

Classical. Dolce Suono is debuting works from composers in their teens and 20s.

Throughout its eighth season, Dolce Suono Ensemble has been celebrating the 150th anniversary of Claude Debussy. This Sunday, the Philly-based chamber ensemble will close that celebration with a special gift to the late French composer: seven new works commissioned to reflect on Debussy's songs and miniature works. The commissions are the result of Dolce Suono's first Young Composers Competition, which called for scores from composers under 30 who are American or enrolled in a U.S. educational institution.

"There's a lot of variety in the seven works," says Dolce Suono's artistic director, Mimi Stillman. "While they all reflect on Debussy, they do so in their individual voices, which range from sophisticated contemporary musical language to more popular-inspired tonality through to very ample use of extended techniques. It shows how fertile Debussy's music is for composers today."

Several of the composers hail from the Philadelphia region, including students at the University of Pennsylvania and at Princeton, though they also range as far afield as Chicago, Michigan and Kentucky. The youngest is only 17 years old. The competition falls in line with Dolce Suono's ongoing effort to add to the chamber repertoire; in its eight years it has presented 31 world premieres, including commissions from emerging composers as well as Grammy and Pulitzer Prize winners.

For Stillman, a flautist who will perform on Sunday along with soprano Sarah Shafer and pianist Natalie Zhu, this season has been the fulfillment of a long-term engagement with Debussy's work. She is also a historian who wrote her thesis on the Asian influences in Debussy's music, as well as a book of arrangements of the composer's songs which she'll draw on for part of this weekend's performance. "I've lived with and studied Debussy and his world for a long time," Stillman says, "so I was really happy to have this anniversary opportunity to delve into his chamber and vocal music."

The program

Modern music

With a program split between Debussy's work and the new pieces inspired by it, Stillman hopes to spotlight his continuing relevance to contemporary music.

"It's always thrilling when you have new work, because you never know what people are going to take away. Every person in the audience will probably have his or her own experience, but I think people will be struck by how alive and modern his music still sounds."

Morris recommends adding Chia seeds to your smoothie. / JULIE MORRIS

Super smoothies

Recipe. Julie Morris tells us to drop the cupcake and slurp on one of these.

It seems everyone is on some sort of green juice or smoothie kick these days.

"We, as a culture, are waking up to the fact that our diets are not doing us any favors," says LA-based natural food chef Julie Morris. "We're tired, we're overweight, we're getting very serious diseases that are largely preventable and diet-related. So because of that, we're turning away from cupcakes and going more toward trends that can actually enhance our life, such as smoothies."

Morris speaks from experience. As a college co-ed she dealt with chronic fatigue, which prompted her to research superfoods and start experimenting in her own kitchen.

"I had such good results in terms of improving my own energy and mental clarity, I realized I wanted to make it a part of my lifestyle." The 32-year-old spent the last decade creating recipes, including the 100 delicious blended drinks in her new book, "Superfood Smoothies." Here, she shares one of her favorite blends, mint chip.

"I like it because it has several cups of frozen spinach, but you don't taste it at all," says Morris. "It tastes like something you'd get at an ice cream shop."

Recipe. Mint Chip Smoothie

Makes two 18-ounce servings

Directions: Blend all the ingredients together until smooth. Taste and sweeten as desired.

Ingredients

- 2 cups frozen spinach
- 2 cups frozen bananas
- 1/4 cup raw cashews
- 3 tablespoons cacao nibs
- 2 tablespoons (packed) fresh mint leaves, minced
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- 2 cups rice milk (original variety)
- 1/2 cup coconut water
- Sweetener, to taste (optional)

Don't let the green color fool you. There's chocolate in here.

1 Poor Melissa Joan Hart

Zach Braff successfully used Kickstarter to raise money for his next film, but former "Sabrina the Teenage Witch" star Melissa Joan Hart hasn't been so fortunate. Around the same time Braff launched his campaign — which has earned $2.6 million so far — Hart launched a campaign to raise $2 million for a romantic comedy, but she was forced to shut the whole thing down earlier this week after raising only $51,605. The 315 people who donated to Hart's campaign will get their money back. The actress' rep did not respond to requests for comment.

Barbie Dream House protested

Barbie isn't getting the warmest of welcomes in Berlin. Protestors from the Left Party showed up in force at the opening of a life-sized Barbie house Thursday. Billed as the "first-ever touring life-size Barbie™ Dreamhouse®," the "Barbie Dreamhouse Experience" is a 27,000-square-foot life-sized pink estate that resembles something Paris Hilton would consider home.

The Dreamhouse is full of Barbie fashion, furniture and accessories, which is exactly what the protestors hate. "They present an image of cooking, primping and singing, as if it were in some way life-fulfilling," Socialist Alternative editor Michael Koschitzki told German newspaper Der Spiegel.

And, you know, I get it. Barbie is a ridiculous ideal, blah, blah, blah. But there are a lot of little girls who like playing with Barbie. They like pink. And just because they do, that doesn't mean Mattel is going to indoctrinate them to give up their career hopes and dreams as though it were some sort of Barbie Dreamhouse of Horrors. Go protest something else real on behalf of women, like the fact that in the U.S. women still make 82 percent of what male counterparts do. Or the fact that women in Saudi Arabia still can't drive. Use your protesting (and your hip, naked flair) for something bigger than Barbie. Compared to that, pink isn't so bad.

5 Eminem remains 'unstabbed'

Eminem wants to make it clear that reports of him being stabbed have been greatly exaggerated. His rep is dismissing Facebook post purporting to show the singer "left nearly dead after being stabbed four times in NYC," according to E! News. "Not true," the rep says. "He remains unstabbed." And it turns out this wasn't just another false Internet rumor about a celebrity dying or getting injured: The post also subjected those foolish enough to click on it to an avalanche of spam.

How sad is it that the first time I've heard of Eminem in years is through Facebook spam?

4 Chloe Sevigny has words for Paltrow

Chloe Sevigny thinks Gwyneth Paltrow may be overreacting by claiming she's through with the Met Gala. (Paltrow has sworn off the swanky New York event after finding this year's "un-fun" and too hot.) "Maybe her sleeves were too tight. If you're in a dress where you can't breathe, then you're not comfortable," Sevigny tells New York magazine. "You have to wear comfortable shoes and an outfit you can be OK in. ... I think it depends on what table you're at, and who you're with, and obviously your attitude," she says.

3 Kanye West is not a celebrity, 'kay?

Despite the fact his baby mama Kim Kardashian has made millions thanks to the paparazzi doesn't mean that Kanye West has to like them. The rapper called out the paparazzi at a concert for the Adult Swim upfronts on Wednesday night in New York. "I'm the worst kinda ... celebrity because all I do is make real music. All I do is sit in the studio and make real, real s—. And that's it," he said while singing in a video captured by Complex Magazine. "So I don't want nobody trying to run up on me with no cameras, trying to sell pictures and s— to magazines, asking me no dumbass questions, throwing me off of my focus and s—," he continued. Don't try to sell pictures to magazines? Isn't that the pot calling the kettle Kardashian?

Brunch

Lamb belly hash

Now that acclaimed chef Mike Stollenwerk, formerly of Fish, is helming Branzino's new 2,500-square-foot kitchen, the menu is getting more interesting. Even better, the Italian restaurant just added brunch hours on Sundays. We're intrigued by the lamb belly hash with fried eggs, and the BYO Bloody Bar Branzino plans to add very soon. Bloody Mary, anyone?

Dinner

Braised short rib tacos

These Smokin' Betty's tacos started life as a special, but lucky for us they were popular enough to earn a spot on the permanent menu. Bite into a perfect mash-up of refried black beans, cheddar cheese, chipotle aioli, avocado, crispy shallots and, of course, braised short rib — all on flour tortillas with a side of cherry tomato salsa ($18).

Lunch

Chinese/ Vietnamese hoagie

This isn't your mama's Wawa shortie. The concoction ($4.95) is Vietnamese restaurant Mi Dac Ky's take on a banh mi, a Vietnamese sandwich, but layered with boneless Peking duck for a Chinese twist. You'll also be biting into duck liver pate, cucumber, carrots, cilantro and jalapenos for kick, layered on a French baguette. The newly opened restaurant just joined a bunch of other Vietnamese spots in the New World Plaza in South Philly.

New things we want to eat right now

There's a lot to be said for counting calories and eating nutritious, home-cooked meals. There is even more to be said for beer cupcakes garnished with bacon. Philly has officially become a foodie town, with delicious new treats being rolled out everywhere we look. Here are a few to try this weekend.

Pie milkshakes

Baker Holly Ricciardi, the pie-making genius behind Magpie on South Street, is liquefying some of her most popular creations. That's right, kids. Pie milkshakes. Pick your favorite slice and Ricciardi will blend it up with Bassetts vanilla ice cream for 16 ounces of creamy, chunky pie heaven. We're planning to keep it classic with the apple pie version ($8.50).

The city is in a festive mood, all weekend long

It's almost summertime, which means weekends are filling up with plans faster than you can burn through a festive little sparkler. We wish, more than ever, that we could be in two places at once, soaking up all the neighborhood events. But instead we'll just have to make a few tough choices. Pencil one of these festivals into your weekend schedule.

For old-world charm

and drool-worthy food

Italian Market Festival

Join in the tradition of one of the most celebrated neighborhoods in the city with the annual Italian Market Festival. Visitors venturing down to this South Philly fiesta will be rewarded with food, face painting for the little ones, a DJ, a magician and, of course, the Procession of the Saints. "The tradition is so important because of the Market's commitment to the community," says festival producer Michele Gambino. "Current neighbors plan parties and open houses around the festival. People who have moved come back to celebrate, and visitors are treated like family."

and family fun

Brewerytown Spring Festival

This fest was first held four years ago under the title Art plus Soul Food. "The next year it became more avenue- and business-based. So for the last two years, it's been the Brewerytown Spring Festival, which really brands the neighborhood," says Tim McAdams, president of the Fairmount CDC. Along with about 20 food trucks on the scene, there will be arts and crafts, home-brewing demonstrations, kids' craft make and takes, and live music.

Saturday
Noon-5 p.m.
2700-2800 blocks of West Girard Ave.

For beer and barbecue

Wheat Beer Fest at South Philly Tap Room

"This isn't a beer tasting where you pay 50 bucks to get in, wait in long lines and people are chugging tiny samples of beer and wearing beads," assures SPTR's bar manager, Kathryn Wiggins. Instead, it's a slow-burning block party that showcases 35 wheat beers, served in full-sized pint glasses for a mere $3 each. Hang out in the street and chow down on barbecue from chef Scott Schroeder. Add in four local bands, and you've got yourself a quintessential South Philly block party.

French chef Marc Plessis lands in Philly, brings whiskey luges

Hot chef. The cook is helming the kitchen at Pennsylvania 6.

Marc Plessis definitely makes our hot chef list. / PENNSYLVANIA 6

The French-born, well-traveled, master of restaurant openings Marc Plessis says that all his career moves were intended to finally bring him to Philadelphia. He's been doing pretty well in Philly, too. The former chef de cuisine at XIX just helped open the kitchen at the new Pennsylvania 6 in Midtown Village. We chatted with him about his past, his latest project and that bone-turned-whiskey luge at Pennsylvania 6 that everyone is buzzing about.

You were born in France. How did you eventually end up in Philly?
We moved to Kentucky when I was 11 because my dad was working for Laughing Cow cheese and they have a factory there. Getting to Philly was a long process of culinary travels — it was not by accident. I was working with Hyatt and I had my eye on the one in Philadelphia.

So that's how you ended up opening XIX. You've also been a part of other restaurant openings.
Yes, I've done quite a few. I've opened in Atlanta, Chicago, and Miami. The one in Miami — Hotel Victor — was the most challenging one because we were opening an entire hotel from scratch.

Do you consider yourself a Philadelphian?
That's interesting. Atlanta was kind of my first home, and I've bounced around a lot since then, spending two or three years in one place. It eats you up. Philly was planned from the get-go. After I left XIX, I was trying to open my own place and things didn't happen. I was concerned because I put so much energy into being here. I stuck it out, and luckily for me it worked out. The long-term goal is to be in Philly and be a Philadelphian.

Everyone is talking about this bone marrow and whiskey luge. Can you explain that?
It's a split femur bone. It's called a canoe cut, because they cut it in half lengthwise. It exposes the bone marrow, which we season and roast and top with a crust. It's rich on rich, and it's got a lot of textures. You scrape out the marrow with a little spoon — and once you're done, you have the option of doing a shot of Woodford Reserve down the center of the bone. It's like Jager shots down an ice sculpture, only it's the food version.

BOOKS

Philadelphia Photo Arts Book Fair

Saturday, noon
Philadelphia Photo Arts Center
1400 N. American St.
Free, 215-232-5678
www.philaphotoarts.org
Who needs a book fair when you can get anything on a Kindle, right? Not so. This is the Photo Arts Book Fair, and photos just don't look as good on that little digital thing, do they? Plus, the selection here runs the gamut from national artists and publishers to local works that can only be referred to as "publishing projects." Featured artists include Vox Populi and Dominic Episcopo.

MUSIC

Tom Jones

Friday, 8 p.m.
Theatre of Living Arts
334 South St.
$50, 215-922-1011

You can tell from his most recent album, "Spirit In the Room," Jones still has it going on at age 72. It's his 40th studio album!

ExtrABBAganza!

Saturday, 8 p.m.
Prince Music Theatre
1412 Chestnut St.
$30-$55, 215-731-9230
www.pgmc.org
Who doesn't love ABBA? Especially when gay men dress up in leotards and sing their songs? We mean the Philadelphia Gay Men's Chorus, of course, who will perform ABBA hits all night. You can play the part as well, by showing up in outrageous '70s attire. Really, you could put any band into this equation and it would be fun, but there's no better band for it than ABBA.

Simon Rattle Conducts Beethoven

♉ Taurus | April 21 - May 21. Your leadership qualities will be quite evident to your colleagues. Don't be surprised if they look to you for direction.

♊ Gemini | May 22 - June 20. This is a good day to nail down a financial arrangement that you've been working on. It should meet expectations.

♋ Cancer | June 21 - July 22. You've got the right moves, whether you're directing a group endeavor or independently launching a new project. Show your stuff.

♌ Leo | July 23 - Aug. 22. Lady Luck has her eye on you, and she's likely to pull some rabbits out of her hat just when you need them the most. Accomplish something big.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23 - Sept. 22. If you need to get approval for something, step up and make your pitch.

♎ Libra | Sept. 23 - Oct. 22. Nostalgia will be a tempting refuge, but don't fall prey to its siren song. There are things in your current life that deserve and demand attention.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23 - Nov. 21. Even though an idea that works exceptionally well happens to be yours, you'll let the group as a whole take the bows.

♐ Sagittarius | Nov. 22 - Dec. 21. The best thing you can do right now is to settle in and do your work as well as you can. You will not go unnoticed.

♑ Capricorn | Dec. 22 - Jan 20. Good friends could prove to be of enormous emotional support. If you're feeling down in the dumps, seek out their company.

♒ Aquarius | Jan. 21 - Feb 18. You'll be more motivated to do a good job if you keep in mind that your labors are not just for you, but for those you love.

♓ Pisces | Feb. 19 - March 20. Good news that will considerably brighten your spirits is forthcoming. It has to do with a relationship.

♈ Aries | March 21 - April 20. An aura of opportunity is embracing you, so make the most of it. Now is the time to go after something you've been hoping to accomplish. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

Graphic cover not needed to make point

Re: "There's blood on your labels" (Metro, May 16) Today's cover of Metro was a photo of a victim of the Bangladesh factory collapse. It was a graphic close-up of his face, frozen in death.

While agreeing that conditions in factories like these deserve attention, there are other, just as impactful ways to do it. The other pictures in the article were far less graphic and still illustrated the point of the article effectively. I think that a widely distributed free paper available to children has a responsibility to not put such disturbing pictures on its cover. I agree wholeheartedly that factory conditions in places like this need to improve, but that doesn't take away from the insensitivity you showed to your readers by shoving such a graphic picture in their faces. If you truly felt that the use of that picture was necessary, it could have been placed INSIDE the paper, with a warning of what the reader would see. I understand that you have the right to publish your paper as you see fit, but I think that putting that picture on your cover was uncalled for and inappropriate. No one should have the choice to not see a dead body taken from them.

Doc's recovery begins after surgery in LA

MLB. The Phillies ace undergoes a successful arthroscopic surgery on injured throwing shoulder.

Halladay is 2-4 this season.
GETTY IMAGES

The Roy Halladay saga continued Thursday — and it might just have a happy ending after all.

The Phillies confirmed that Halladay underwent successful arthroscopic surgery on his injured right shoulder in Los Angeles. The pitcher could begin throwing in six to eight weeks.

"Roy had successful shoulder surgery [Wednesday]," said Phillies team physician Dr. Michael Ciccotti. "He had an arthroscopic evaluation and underwent debridement of his labrum and rotator cuff as well as removal of an inflamed bursa. He'll begin a progressive rehabilitation program and if all goes well, he may possibly begin a throwing program in six to eight weeks."

Last Wednesday, Halladay held a press conference to announce he would need surgery. He had been diagnosed with a bone spur in his throwing shoulder and a partial tear of his rotator cuff.

Halladay (8.65 ERA) had been struggling. Prior to the diagnosis, he combined to allow 17 runs in back-to-back games.

McNabb: No date set yet

Donovan McNabb dispelled rumors that he will be honored by the Eagles in Week 3.

The QB said the two sides have been talking about a ceremony, but no date has been picked.

"Everything right now is in the works, nothing is written in stone," McNabb told 97.5 The Fanatic. "It was just one step of acknowledging that I wanted to retire as a Philadelphia Eagle."

Sixers to interview Sampson

The Sixers received permission to interview Rockets assistant Kelvin Sampson.

The move, first reported by the Philadelphia Inquirer, has new GM Sam Hinkie's imprints all over it. Hinkie came over from the Houston organization.

Sampson was infamously dismissed from Oklahoma over recruiting violations.

Sixers' Young missing the playoff party

NBA. Player with the longest tenure on the team vows to maintain conditioning in a tough offseason.

Young is coming into his own.
GETTY IMAGES

Six years ago, Thaddeus Young was a wide-eyed rookie from Georgia Tech. Everything was new. Everything was intriguing, exhilarating.

Now Young is the longest-tenured player on the Sixers. In six seasons, he has played for four coaches — Maurice Cheeks, Tony DiLeo, Eddie Jordan and Doug Collins. A fifth coach is on the way.

As the regular season wound down, Young looked tired. It wasn't physical exhaustion as much as mental exhaustion. No player on the Sixers wants to win more than Young.

"There's nothing like it," Young said. "We work so hard, and you want to be rewarded for it. You want to be playing in the postseason."

Young has played in his share of playoff games and sitting home just isn't the same.

"Yeah, I'll watch some of the playoff games, but it's tough, you know?" said Young, "I plan on working extremely hard in the offseason. I have to maintain my conditioning."

FANTASY

ADAM LEVITAN, JUST A GUY LIVING THE FANTASY

METRO'S FANTASY GURU BREAKS IT ALL DOWN FOR YOU EVERY WEEK

HOPE SPRINGS ETERNAL: FIRST LOOK AT NFL ROOKIES AND EARLY DEPTH CHARTS

A lot of old-school NFL people will brush off the non-padded offseason workouts as meaningless. They are wrong.

The OTAs are the first time coaches get a look at their new toys. It's also the first time we get a gander at initial depth charts, which can help us uncover the hidden gems that decide fantasy titles.

Recent sleepers, such as Arian Foster and Denarius Moore, first shined during these workouts. With that in mind, let's take a look:

Brick in the wall. New Cardinals coach Bruce Arians is a dream for fantasy owners. He gets his receivers open vertically, doesn't throw to running backs and keeps the pedal to the metal at all times.

Larry Fitzgerald is going to have a bounce-back campaign, but the No. 2 wideout in this scheme is also set up for success. Andre Roberts ended the 2012 season in that spot, but second-year man Michael Floyd opened up OTAs as the starter. Floyd, a rare strength/speed talent, is an ideal sleeper.

On the Ball. Montee Ball's NFL career is off to a fast start. Coach John Fox has a reputation for holding rookies back, but he's been heaping praise on the former Wisconsin back.

Vice-president John Elway is comparing Ball to Terrell Davis and Fox is downplaying the disappointing 4.66 wheels he showed at the combine

Once the Broncos cut loose Willis McGahee or Knowshon Moreno, Ball's stock is going to soar.

Hop to it. Sometimes, a rookie steps onto the field and is even better than the franchise expected. That appears to be the case with DeAndre Hopkins.

Check out these quotes from coach Gary Kubiak: "He's special. Ball skills are extremely special: very long, long arms, big hands. He's going to help us early, and we know that, and that's why we brought him here." Hopkins is in line for instant impact.

Denver didn't take Ball in second round to sit him. /GETTY IMAGES

Play your position

The Vikings have moved quarterback Joe Webb to wide receiver, according to the Star-Tribune. The move had been assumed after the Vikings signed Matt Cassel. Webb, who played receiver in college, could see increased role, maybe in the slot. He's extremely athletic.

Strong words

"Broncos Vice President John Elway is comparing Montee Ball to Terrell Davis. Ball's stock is going to soar."

MLB pickups

The fantasy baseball season is starting to heat up. Keep these names in mind if you are looking to tweak your roster this week:

- Andrew Bailey, RP, Red Sox. Bailey is ready to come off the DL as soon as Monday. The saves shouldn't be far behind.
- Heath Bell, RP, Diamondbacks. It probably won't be pretty, but Bell is holding off David Hernandez for now.
- Dayan Viciedo, 3B, White Sox. Finally over his oblique strain, Viciedo is hitting .429 with four RBIs in his first five games back. You know the drill — if he's still available.
